WHEELING, W. VA., OCTOBER 1, 1887.

It was stiggether natural for the builder and owners and British friends of the Thistle to be disappointed over the defeat of the swift cutter; but those gentlemen take their discomfiture in a seemly way. Those who mourn without comfort are the very knowing Anglomaniacs who were confident of the Thistle's success. They expected the Thistle to win, not because they knew her to be a better boat, but because she was a British boat, Being of this turn of mind, they ventured their good American dullars on the Thistle, and, though they lost, they will have it that the Thistle would have won if the wind and water had been different.

As an offset to this picture, it must be admitted that the mass of Americans hurrahed for the Volunteer not because they knew her to be the better boat, but because she was an American boat. This was a natural and proper manifestation of national pride-a very different thing from the spirit of todylam which filled the narrow bosoms of those Americans who howled for the British cutter and are not yet reconciled to her defeat. The men who backed the Thistle for no other reason thau that she was British are the men who are British ways and make thomselves a laughing stock at home and abroad. If the Thirteen Colonies had been made of such material they would have been colonies to this day. Presidential Material in the Two Partles

Ex-Mayor Grace, of New York, a Democratof the Democrate, puts his idea of the next Presidential tickets in this concisa form: "Mr. Claveland's nomination I regard as a certainty; not only will no one have the temerity to oppose him, but the Democratic party has no one to offer in his stead at this time. Mr. Blaine's nomination is of course not so certain. Nevertheless, I think it very probable." This is an absolutely correct view of the situation, and a just estimate of the two parties. The Democracy, out of all the millions of its voters, has but one man to put forward for the Presidency, and that one, a man for whom it has no special fondness. The Democratic party must take Mr. Cleveland again or go into the campaign with no hope whatever of electing

Not so with the Republican party. Mr. Grace says, the nomination of Mr. Blaine is probable, but the Republican party is not in such straitened circumstances that it is Blaine or nobody. It never had more good men to select from

than it has to-day.

What would happen to the Democratic party if Mr. Cleveland were suddenly translated, as Enoch was?

The Maryland Campaign.

The campaign in Maryland is being fought with great earnestness by the allied Republicans and Independent Democrats, and with equal desperation by the Gorman gang of regulars. The local papers teem with reports of meetings, with ddresses and paid communications. Gor-

The third consequence of Republican success in Maryland this year would be success in Maryland this year would be the defeat of the Democratic party in the mational struggle next year. In fact, the bestile for the Fresidency is being fought at this very dection in Maryland. It is not merely a local tight, but a national one that its going on within the borders of our little State, and the fate of the Fresidency hinges upon it. Thanks to Mr. Cowen, the eyes of the whole country have been drawn to this struggle, and Democrata and Republicans in other States are watching its progress with intense interest. The words of aid and comfort thatcome to Mr. Cowen are the pious ejeculations of Republican newspapers who are interested, not in the reforms which he pretends to desire, but in the defeat of the Democratic party in this State and the consequent roturn of the Republican party to power in the stone of the Maryland this year intense foliated bugaboo. Every voter in this State knows how narrow was the majority by which Mr. Cleveland was elected in 1881. The Democratic party cannot afford to lees a single State that it carried then. Defeat in Maryland this year means defeat next. Every Independent Democrat who may be inclined to assert his independence should remember the cost of what he proposes to do.

The same article contains this promise of good behavior in the better days to come:

The same article contains this promise of good behavior in the better days to come:

Whatever cause of complaint there may have been in the past, however, will not exist in the future. The Democratic party is pledged to a new election law as party is pledged to a new election law as rigorous and complete as can be devised. What, then, is to be gained by deserting the Democratic party to support the Republican? Not fair elections, certainly, for the Democratic party is pledged to secure their absolute fairness hereafter, and if the Democratic party is capable of breaking their pledge, the Republican party is far less to be depended on to observe its promises.

This deep not satisfy the Democratically.

This deep not satisfy the Democratically.

This deep not satisfy the Democratically.

This does not satisfy the Democrats who are rebelling against the corrupt Gorman ring. They know that the ring which now promises "absolute fairness here after" has notoriously and shamefully debanched the elections in the past, and they do not mean to trust it again. They entertain a reasonable misgiving that when the devil gets well he will have no inclination to be a monk. Instead of falling into the Gorman trap and permitting themselves to be stuffed with Gorman fortily their position with a public address that goes to the heart of the controvery. This is taken from a lengthy abstract of the decument in the unitiently Sun:

and proscription ers, and his lleutenan-who was secretary of a No-Nothing club. "It is a purely commercial association who was become commercial account and legislation and patronage as when properly estimated, higher than that of any other city on the Atlan-tic cosst, save Jersey City." The charge the association (the Democratic party) is therefore with appointing to public office hieves, burglars, express robbers, murlerers, &c., and with rewarding from the control of the control of the ballots while in charge of the atatue books with laws fit only to be in-struments of crime; that the same attor-ney has been employed to evade the plat-form promises of reform for the past twelve years, and is sgain chairman of the committee to prepare the laws prom-ised by the last convention.

"It is idle to blind our eyes to that fact, or to make excuses for ourselves. If we refrain from voting the regular Demo-cratic ticket, we do it to elect the Repub-ilcan ticket. We propose, as Democrate, to vote directly for the men who are runo vote directly for the men who are run tally responsible for our acts. It has republican party can secure its best men for oilice, and tell us in plain English what it means to do, and that which claims to be the Democratic party cannot, then we will give the, Republican candidates a chance, and will send the pseudo-Damocratic, and will send the pseudo-Damocratic, and will send the pseudo-Damocratic. cratic party into retirement until it rids itself of the evil influences by which it is now controlled." At the public meeting at which the ad-irces was adopted, Mr. S. Teakle Wallis said he intended to vote for Oleveland. but he would do so with better heart if the President would rid himself of the contamination of the Gorman influence. When Mr. Wallis said this he had not yet had a chance to read the quotation above n which it is declared in so many words hat the present fight of Gorman to keep himself in power is also a fight to hold the State for Cleveland.

The ringsters admit that if they lose Maryland now they cannot rec'aim it next year. The Independents prefer to run this risk, rather than put up with the rule of the criminal classes. It is a savage contest, and the eyes of the country are turned toward Maryland to goe how she will bear herself in the most important political struggle in her history.

New Publications. During the war time loyal people re garded John S. Mosby as altogether a bad nan, the worst sort of mixture of the spy and the guerrilla, who would rather take a nean advantage of a Yankee throat than be turned loose in a sutler's tent. The Mosby of fact was a cultivated gentleman, who left his place at the Virginia bar to batter Uncle Sam all he knew how. In his "War Reminiscences," just published, he tells how he got into the army and what he did after he got there. It is a tale of military adventure of great interest modestly told. It deals in criticism to some extent, but it is mainly a narative of the cavalry movements in which Mosby's men bore a part, and as such it has value and absorbing interest. Not the least entertaining part of the book is that which is devoted o the brilliant J. E. B. Stuart, for whom Nosby shows a particularly warm side. Nobody who roads these reminiscenses will regret the time so separt. George A. Jones & Co., Boston; Stanton & Davenport, Wheeling.

"It is a purely commercial association, trading in legislation and patronage as a business," it says, and, continuing, the address charges that the organization has banded together the criminal classes for election and other purposes, and that in more than one instance they have not stopped at marder. "Seven men have been appointed to office under the city, State and National Government within a few months past who have taken human life, and these appointments have not been made by oversight, but in spite of all protests; in most cases they were reappointments." The charge is then made who felt maddened at the expectance of the protection in the large protection of the communication in the large large protection of the protection of the protection of the protection of the communication in the large large position of the protection of the protection of the large la who felt maddened at the exposure of thei plans. The Register's correspondent cer tainly failed to read John K. Cowan's let ter to the Baltimore Sun of recent date There is cause in that letter for excitemen and indignation. And the Baltimore Chio has done a great deal more for Baltimore than it has ever done for Grafton.
